Swiss Issue Warrants for Arrest of Irvings

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Author Clifford Irving was temporarily excused today from appearing before a New York County grand jury investigating the purported Howard Hughes autobiography, but Swiss authorities, meanwhile, issued arrest warrants for Mr. Irving and his wife,

Mr. Irving's appearance before the grand jury in Manhattan was postponed so he could have more time to consult his new lawyer, criminal-law specialist Maurice Nessen. No date for another scheduled appearance before the grand jury was set.

Mr. Irving appeared today for a 15-minute interrogation by Robert Morvillo, assistant U.S. attorney in charge of criminal investigations here. Later, Mr. Irving evaded newsmen by slipping out a back entrance of the federal building.

In Zurich, District Attorney Peter Veleff said his office issued the arrest warrants for the 41year-old New Yorker and his Swiss-born fourth wife after finding about 1.7 million Swiss francs-the equivalent of about $442,000 in a branch of the Swiss Bank Corp.

The funds apparently represented what is left of $650,000 that two New York publishing firms gave Mr. Irving, in checks, for delivery to Mr. Hughes for rights to his autobiography. The 230,000-word book was allegedly written by Mr. Irving after 100 hours of taped interviews with the billionaire recluse. Mr. Veleff said the warrants were issued because of "urgent suspicion of fraud, falsification of official documents and instigation of these crimes."

Mr. Hughes, last interviewed in public by an accredited journalist in 1957, has denied in recent court affidavits that he ever met Mr. Irving or authorized a biography by the writer. Mr. Irving has sald that his wife, at Mr. Hughes's request, opened a bank account in Zurich under the name of Helga R. Hughes, and deposited the $650,-000 in three checks after endorsing them "H. R. Hughes." He said that his wife withdrew the Swiss equivalent of $650,000 after the checks cleared, and deposited them in another bank as an investment in growth securities. But he reportedly admitted that some of the funds had been spent elsewhere, without specifying where, but presumably on his and a researcher's expenses. In Zurich, the district attorney

The president was making his second visit to Peking in less than three months. The last time he came here was as a repre-sentative of former President Mohammed Yayha Khan, now under house arrest in Pakistan.

Mr. Bhutto arrived in Peking a day after he announced that Pakistan was pulling out of the Commonwealth because of the imminent recognition of Bangla-desh by Britain, Australia and New Zenland.

The government had planned a tumultuous welcome for the Pakistani leader and a rehearsal was held in Peking's Tienanmen Square yesterday. But since np to 500,000 people had been mobilized earlier to clear snow from the streets, it was felt the govern-ment did not want to call out the masses twice in ons day.

Pakistan sources said Mr.
Bhutto and Mr. Chou tonight were discussing the new situation on the subcontinent, the question of Indian occupation forces in East Bengal and Pakistan's future role in Asian affairs.

The Peking People'e Daily today printed an editorial strongly attacking India and the Soviet Union. The Communist party newspaper questioned whether Bangladesh was a "fait :ccompli" and said the whole world could see it was created by the Indian government through naked aggression and suhversion and with the support of Soviet revisionism.

Until recently the Labor party's principal figures had largely abstained from criticizing the Conservative covernment's handling of the worsening affair.

Yesterday, Harold Wilson, the Labor leader, urged transferring responsibility for security in Ulster from the provincial gov-ernment at Stormont Castle to the Parliament at Westminster. Mr. Wilson was all but proposing what many insist is a necessary first step to resolving the crists, direct rule over the province from

The disaster in Londonderry began when Miss Devite and others led more than ten thousand civil-rights demonstrators in a march through the Catholic slum known as the Bogside. The Stormont regime has banned all processions, and the marchers ran into a barricade manned by troops. The soldiers were showered with stones and glass from a segment of demonstrators. Then paratroopers in armored cars burst out through the barricade to make arrests-

What happened next is the source of complete and unremit-ing dispute from eyewitnesses. The army says its men came un-der fire and took 50 to 80 shots before the paratroopers opened up at "identified targets."

Two reporters at the scene, Simon Winchester, of the Guar-dian, and John Graham, of the Financial Times, say only one or a few shots were fired before the paratroopers let loose. Catholics on the spot, including priests, charge the soldiers fired indis-criminately into the crowd.

When it was over, 13 civilians were dead and 18 were injured, including a woman run over by an army armored car.

For Mr. Maudling it was a case of marchers defying law and order, the army acting with restraint and finally returning rifle fire with rifle fire, For Catholics in Northern and southern Ireland, it is British troops warring on their own, Conor Cruise O'Brien, the for-

The latest trial heat results represent little overall change in the population: since the previous survey in late November. However, Sen. Muskie

Gains Among Republicans

Analysis of the trial heat results by party affiliation shows that Sen. Muskie has doubled his vote among Republicans since October—from only 6 percent in that survey to 13 percent in the latest survey.

He has maintained his same level of support among voters un-der 30 that be held in October, but he has added new supporters among those 30 and older.

Far Short of Goal

appeared that the APLcito would emerge from the state convention's voting withonly one or two national-convention delegates, whereas its amounted goal had been 10,
Mr. Aycock himself lost in his own legislative district.

Mayor Lindsay, in capturing nearly a fourth of the ballots and assuring himself probably six national-convention delegates, astonished politicians in every teams. camb:

"He came into the campaign late, with a three-day stumping swing, and then relied on extensive use of television, radio and billboard advertising-media exploitation in which he outspent

Mr. Lindsay was particularly strong in some Mexican-American neighborhoods. In a Phoenix district where he was endorsed by a Chicano organization he picked up 14 state con-vention votes, the largest bloc won anywhere by any candidate. But this support was strikingly broad-based. He picked up delegates in remote rural areas amone Indians and Mexican-Americans, split the student vote with Sen. Campaigning in Wisconsin Mr. Lindsay said that the Arisons election "shows that people can make up their own minds" and that "an underdog can do it." He said that if it proves true that his delegates out across social and economic lines, he may alter his campaign to give it a more populist flavor.

Sen Muskie's performance added nothing to his nationalthough he had the support of most Democratic legislators and county chairmen and the organization of Rep. Morris K. Udall Rep. Udall said the "big plus" for Sen. Muskie was the defeat of labor's uncommitted-delegate strategy. The congressman had appealed unsuccessfully to labor's national political director, Alexander Barkan, to abandon that strategy in Arizona and to support Sen. Muskie.

Rep. Udall asserted that money and media were responsible for Mr. Lindsay's success but added, "You've just got to say that he's got a lot of appeal, particularly to the young people."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, of Washington, may pick up one or two national-convention delegates from among the uncommitted, The unusual cumulative voting

Each voter could cast a number of votes equal to the number of candidates elected in each legislative district. He could either spread his votes among all of his candidate's delegates or use all his ballots for only a few.

If the statewide returns had reflected simply the number of people who went to the polls, it appeared that Sen. Muskie's share of the total would exceed

The 28-year-old witness, one of new prospective jurors called in the conspiracy trial, was asked by defense attorney J. Thomas Menaker how he would feel toward certain witnesses who may testify in behalf of the Rev. Philip P. Berrigan and his six codefendants. Mr. Menaker asked if the prospective juror, a plant training supervisor, had any personal feelings against individuals who hod "long hair, beards and wear unconventional clothing."

"No, I don't, as long as they are clean—not downright dirty." the prospect replied. "I don't like them if they smell bad."

Of the new panelists summoned at the start of the trial's second week, 34 were immediately ex-cused. Father Berrigan and six other anti-war activists are charged with conspiring to kid-nap White House adviser Henry Rissinger and bomb government buildings.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (AP)-Henry A. Kissinger loves his job, but may retire in a year even if Mr. Nixon wins a second term this fall, according to Washington insiders quoted yesterday by Newsweek.

U.S. Doctors Snap Shots, Save Words

Boston Hospital Fights MD Scribble

BOSTON, Jan. 31 (AP).-Doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital are snapping color photos of everything in sight— from infected toes to badly-cut

And all because doctors have sloppy handwriting and don't always have time to write out extensive reports on patients.

Dr. Kenneth T. Bird, who is directing the experiment, explain-ed that all the photos will be kept in the hospital's medical records. He predicted that, one day, all hospital records will include photos, sound recordings and sketches as well as extensive reports written on special typewriters using medical shorthand.

"The records system . . . is largely word-oriented, and unfortunately it's in the worst model

-handwriting.
"Doctors tend to communicate with so many people in handwriting that it gets sloppy in a hurry, The handwriting of the physician is notoriously poor," Dr. Bird

"With the visual approach." he added, "we can save hours of time, hours of laborious reading and of deciphering notes written by physicians, nurses and all sorts of bealth professionals."

More Information

He added: "With visuals, the clinician can collect more information about a patient than can be written down in a reasonable

Dr. Bird noted that another reason why medical records are often sketchy is that with the present doctor shortage, doctors are pressed for time and don't always put enough data on reports.

He said that everything from copies of X-rays to photos from the patients' family snapshot album could be included in the medical record of tomorrow. X-rays are often kept in separate files in hospitals, some distance from other records. Old photos might show how persons with, for example, a hip problem used to stand or sit when they were younger and so help doctors diagnose the ailments.

Dr. Bird is certain the new-look records will also contain video tapes of, for example, a patient who has a heart condition and respiratory complications.

This would belp doctors, even years later, to see the symptoms of the condition as they occurred and not have to read a cursory "breathing beavy, facial discolor-ation" on a medical form.

By Anthony Lewis exhaustion would occur, and food rates will not be steady: They

LONDON-In the memory of the race, man has always struggled to overcome the limits imposed by nature. His success has been spectacular, especially in this last century of accelerating technology: Today he sees that he has the means to light pestilence and disease, to unlock even the binding energy of the material world.

When he is told now that the growth of population and production threatens his existence that growth is approaching its earthly limits his inevitable reaction is to regard that warning as one more challenge to be overcome. Surely the technology that has enabled himan society to grow so rapidly will find a way to break through the limits.

That is one instinct underlying our refusal to believe the scientists who in growing numbers see ecological disaster ahead. Even when they avoid doomsday thatoric, when they are most calm and reasonable, their message of inescapable limits is difficult to accept. Skeptical listeners, if they articulate their disbeller, argue that man can find or make substitutes for resources that run out. He can multiply the yield of crops, carrying the green revointion further. He can eliminate

Cost Factor

But the skeptics overlook the fact that every piece of tech-nology has a cost. Manufacturing some new plastic instead of using carce natural material causes pollution. Suppressing pollution recuires capital investment in machinery that in turn has sideeffects. Our life on earth cannot be separated into convenient compartments. Everything we do affects everything else, and in the end technology cannot escape a finite planet.

Food production is a good example. We know what remarkable gains there have been in agricultural yields. But there are costs, too.

World food production increased by a third between 1951 and 1966. That required increases over those 15 years of 63 percent in the money spent amusly on tractors, 146 percent in the spending for nitrate fertilizers, 800 percent on pesticides. It will be significantly more costly to achieve the next one-third growth in food production. And of course the investment, in addition to putting a burden on resources, causes pollution and exhaustion of crop

Scientists who have been studying growth and ecology for the Club of Rome, an eminent international group, have demonstrated how the problems are inextricably interconnected. The findings are fascinating—and chilling.

The researchers projected tha continuation of present growth trends. They discounted major wars or other serious dislocations. They made the optimistic assumption of a 250-year supply of all use. (But the point is that the will increase exponentially with population and consumption.)

Prisoner of War

The Earthly Future: To Grow and to Die—II

Their projections showed the world pattern of growth collapsing within 100 years because of natural resource shortages. It would become increasingly difficult to get at raw materials, requiring more capital. Food supplies would fall as fertilizer requirements could not be met.

Then the scientists assumed that the supply of resources was doubled. On that model, rapidly increasing poliotion caused col-

The next projection made the further assumption, quite unrealistic, that by 1975 pollution all over the world will be reduced by three-quarters. That would allow industrial growth to carry on longer. But the expansion of cities and industry would use up agricultural land, erosion and land would run short.

Finally, on top of their optimistic assumptions about resources and pollution, the scienhling of agricultural yields. That allowed a huge industrial expansion-and then collapse because of pollution, despite strict antipollution measures

Even population control of unimaginable perfection would not avert the collapse. The scientists assumed that world population was absolutely stabilized by 1975. with births equaling deaths. For a while, per capita income and food supplies would grow rapidly. But once again natural resources would run out.

The conclusion of the scientists was that there is only one, way crashing into the earthly limits. That is to moderate all the interconnected factors: population, pollution, industrial production. The essential is to stop economic growth. We shall have to await publication of the Club of Rome report-in March-to judge how convincing its scientific arguments and mathematical analyses are. But there is already conviction in the sober method used. and in the fact that this group comes out with the same answer as other reputable studies and books increasingly have—the answer of the stable state.

In itself, the autouncement that Moscow and Tokyo would begin negotiations on a pesce treaty this year does not neces-sarily mean that they have found a formula for resolving their long dispute over four islands in the Kurlle chain, north of Japan, occupied by Soviet troops at the

No Clear Offer

Apparently Gromyko did not make a clear offer to return all or even some of the islands. At the same time, the declaration that negotiations would begin does reflect a significant softening in the traditional anti-Soviet attitude of the Old Guard in the ruling Liberal Democratic party and in corresponding Soviet sus-picion toward the business-dominated Japanese leadership. Both sides have an obvious common interest in at least giving the appearance of a change in their relations at a time when President Richard Nixon is about to visit Peking and Moscow. With the Chinese actively courting

Japan, Moscow is also anxious to justify the impact of the Tyumen deal in relations with Peking and Washington, this argument runs. Japan would have to drive a hard bargain with the Russians in economci terms when the joint Japan-U.S.R. economic committee meets here for a crucial round of talks on Feb. 20. Gromyko reportedly hinted last week that Soviet nevotistors would spell out concrete terms for the Tynnen deal in the forthcoming economic meeting if the Japanese government would forticipation in the project. This would commit Japan to the project politically, an important gain for Moscow in its contest with China and it would also imply possible low-interest loans from the government Export-Import Bank, or at least government backing for private bank loans giving Moscow the freedom to pick and choose among competing Japanese con-

Private Business

Until now, Japanese leaders have attempted to keep the Tyu-men project on a private business basis offering only commercial credits tied to purchases through specified Japanese trading comes. Japan has been represented by business leaders in the joint economic committee. The communique issued by Gromyko and Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda last week took a step toward meeting the Soviet request for official involvement by stating that the two governments "confirmed the importance" of agreements reached in the economic Given progress on the economic

The return of the two islands closest to the spanese northern island of Hokkaido, Habomai and Shikotan, might then be promised or actually returned at the time a peace treaty is signed, with Japa-nese claims to the two larger islands of Etorofu and Kunashiri left pending. But this would depend on how fulsome Soviet econamic offers turn out to be, it is said, and on how things go in economic and political dealings with Peking and Washington

Tet Looms Once Again In Vietnam

By Don Oberdorfer

WASHINGTON .- Four yeare ago this weekend, a Vietnamese corporal guarding the government radio station at Nhatrang, a city of 119,000 halfway up the coast of South Vietnam, spotted some suspicious visitors in government army uniforms walking around in the middle of the night. To test their reactions, he fired a few rounds of his machine gun into a nearby field. The "government army" visitors returned the fire with Chinese-made AK-47s.

These were the opening shots, on Jan. 30, 1968, of the Communist Tet offensive which made nearly every city in Vietnam a blazing battleground. By the time the shooting finally sprittered out two months later, the shock wave in the United States had shattered public confidence, virtually destroyed the political of President Johnson, and brought about the cessation of U.S. bombing of most of North Vietnam.

mere historical interest at this beginning of another presidential election year, except for one fact: The North Vietnamese are moving large numbers of troops again, and another American President is apprehensive that he's going to get whacked.

Expected

White House officials say they are convinced that the North Vietnamese leaders made a big decision last November to try another big offensive early in 1972. The battle is unlikely to begin exactly at the Tet (Lunar New Year) holiday, which is Feb. 15 this year, and it is unlikely to be anything as bold, dramatic or extensive as the 1968 affair. Still, high officials are saying that the Tet offensive of 1972 may last two or three months, and that it may approach the earlier battle in intensity.

Some of the "big battle" talk may be protective psychology, to guard against any possible public shock and to make the eventual blow seem smaller than expected. But there is no doubt that the prospect of major military ection just ahead is taken very seriously at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. This prospect is among the most important reasons for President Nixon's decision to "go public with Henry Kissinger's secret negotiations last week after years of deep secrecy.

By getting on the record now as the man who walked "the extra mile" for peace, Mr. Nixon is in a better position to take the gaff at home if the battlefield blazes anew. Moreover, he is positioned to take strong retaliatory action, heavy bomb-ing of North Vietnam and other moves, and blame the North Vietnamese for choosing warfare instead of offers of "peace."

familiar on both sides. On the U.S. side, private peace feelers conveyed offers which the Vietnamese Communists will not accept-quite possibly followed by retaliatory raids justified on the ground that the enemy is still fighting. Where have we heard that before?

On the other side, this may be another battle in the classic Vietnamese Communist double play, a big attack accompanied by or followed by a major diplomatic move—as in the case of Dienbienphu (1954) or Tet (1968). Mr. Nixon's associates are saying they believe that after this one more big bash, as they call it, the other side will settle. But that, too, is an echo of the past. It proved untrue before, at least if one defines "settle" as a synonym for capitulate.

Back Again

So we are back again at the same old problem, though under altered circumstances. The essential question is still control of South Vietnam, and on that neither Washington nor Hanol. it seems, is willing to compromise. In the long run, the North Vietnamese appear to have the greater leverage, for the U.S. effort in Indoching is melting like block of ice. After all U.S. troops are out, it still may require some $2 billion or $3 billion annually of American aid to keep South Vietnam's big military machine afloat. The American public, through Congress, will not long continue to pay such a price for a war the nation only wants to forget.

As much as anything else, the spectacular Tet attack of just four years ago changed the U.S. public mind about the war, and thus fundamentally affected all that has followed. It seems unlikely that the Tet offensive of 1972 will be nearly so historic. But it hasn't happened yet, and in dealing with Vietnam, it is always wise to wait and see.

Vietnam Policy

The New York Times editorial "Openings Toward Peace" (IHT, Jan 28) at least admits that the new Nixon proposals marit careful exploration and should not written off. In contrast The Washington Post, clinging to the old kick-Nixon obsession, shabbily dirmisses them as the "Same Old Shell Game." The Post eeems to align itself with the Kennedy-McGovern axis in urging abject surrender as the price for liberating less than a thousand prisoners of war.

Editorials such as the Post's undernine the President's manful efforts to wind down this inherited war and serve to prolong it. But if Mr. Nixon can be cudgelled, all other considerations are seemingly thrown to the winds. This writer has been a Democrat for 54 years, but an American for 75.

LONDON, Jan. 31 (AP) .- With the cuts would be doubled to 6 the thermometer at the freezing point, railroads hit by labor trouble, coal supplies short because of a nationwide miners' strike and the threat of power cuts in the air, Britons tonight faced a cold winter, indeed.

Journalists Call Attention to Crisis

Day's Strike Blanks Out Press in France

By James Goldsborough PARIS, Jan. 31 (IHT).-Newspapers across France shut down this afternoon as journalists walked out on a 24-hour strike to focus attention on the growing press crisis.

None of the 11 Paris dailies will publish tomorrow, and only a handful of provincial newspapers will be on sale. Television and radio newscasts will be held to a minimum. In all, more than 11 million of the 12 million newspapers sold daily in this country will be miss-ing in what the National Federation of Journalists Unions called the first nationwide strike movement of this kind.

The strike was originally called last week to protest the discharge of 33 employees by Paris-Jour. When Paris-Jour ceased publication last week over the discharges, the journalists' union voted to strike because, as was explained in a statement today, "the press crisis is a national

One of the main purposes of the strike was to hasten some form of government action to aid a sick industry. Prime Minister Jacques Chahan-Delmas already has called in the owner of Parishis teem's work in surrounding Jour to see what it would take to ister Valery Giscard d'Estaing said last week that direct govern-ment aid was a strong possibility and Friday, returning from Africa, President Georges Pompidou said that the problem was under study by the government. Rising costs and reduced advertising revenoes have forced ever more newspapers into the

But though agreeing on the basic trouble, which is not unique to France, French newspaper sources cannot agree on how to fight it. This was shown once again during a long radio debate on the crisis tonight.

Government Blamed

Jacques Fauvet, of Le Monde, argued that newspapers must raise their prices and reduce their dependence on advertising, Pierre Lazareff, of France-Soir; called it a "world crisis" caused by the impact of television and the increasing importance of periodicals compared to the daily press. Other voices blamed the unions, television advertising and increasing costs such as newsprint.

There was unanimity, however, in blaming the government for having refused to legislate conditions which would allow more newspapers to operate profitably. Paul Parisot, president of the pated in the debate, put the blame for the crisis not on the government, "but this kind of internecine squabbling that we are seeing here tonight." He said that the French press would likely be in less trouble if the journalists' unions had been allowed to participate in some of the basic decisions that affected the press. The first concrete step taken by any newspaper since the Paris-Jour shutdown came yesterday when Paris'e only Sunday paper, le Journal du Dimanche, raised its price to 1.5 francs (30 cents). In a front-page editorial the newspaper said the increase was made necessary by the higher costs of printing on Sunday. Other papers are expected to raise their prices in the next few weeks.

Most of the acrimony in this dispute clearly flows between newspapers and television. The printed press here has actively criticized the state-owned television's growing cut of the advertising pie.

Two government committees have been set up to consider measures to help. Among those being considered are postal reductions, tax reductions, newsprint subsidies and direct sub-

"Subversion considers youth its most fertile grounds for its frac-turing objectives," Gen. Franco said in a speech before the 12th national council of Spain's National Movement, the only political group allowed in Spain. "Subversion does not spare any effort to introduce its activists among young workers and stu-dents," the Spanish chief of state said.

Gen. Franco's speech follows two weeks of student unrest in Madrid and other cities. As he spoke, however, Madrid's three campuses had returned practically to normal, with only medical students still on strike.

Youth Exploited Gen. Franco, 79, said, "noble, youthful nonconformity" was inspired by the "generous wish of urgent social perfection." However, this has been exploited, be said, "for the gain of turbulent designs masked under appearances that in no way coincide with the real aim of its inspirers. In order to adequately fight sub-version, precise action . . is necessary."

He did not say what action would be taken. During the first five days of student unrest, 123 students were arrested, and the government said the disturbances which resulted in clashes between riot and mounted police and stone-throwing students had been stirred up by left-wing "subver-Gen. ## Ormandy Leads Orchestre National

By David Stevens

PARIS, Jan. 31 (IHT).—The last week was one of unaccustomed orchestral riches for Paris, with the Orchestre National of the French Radio in high spirits under Eugene Ormandy, and joined by Isaac Stern and Leonard Rose in a Brahms festival that filled the Thésire des Champs-Elysées when it was not occupied by the Orchestre de Paris, Georg Solti and Bartok.

Ormandy is 72, although he eems ageless, and he has spent almost half that time with his peerless Philadelphia Orchestra so much with it that he is only rarely seen in the company of other orchestras. But when he is he seems to be able to impart some of the same magic, for he is a conductor who knows what he wants and how to get it without undue fuss. Simplicity technique is simplicity itself. He plants his feet firmly and stands absolutely upright giving clear beats and accents with compact gestures, and urg-ing his charges on to the climaxes with controlled passion. The National ensemble—which incidentally was founded about the time Ormandy went to Philadelphiaresponded in kind, with a richness and balance of tone and a unity of purpose that it does not always exhibit, and which was equally vitalizing for the architectural grandeur of the First Symphony and the pastoral freshness of the Second.

At the second concert on Thursday, Stern and Rose lent their familiar collaboration and tone and poised nobility of style to the Double Concerto, although a few days earlier Stern seemed ill at ease and below his own form for about half of the Violin Concerto, hefore settling down to a brilliant third move-

Gordon Govier's sculpture is the most savage political-satirical art produced in England for a long time. He exaggerates the physical characteristics of his victims very little (an exception is Prime Minister Edward Heath, with long nose flaring beneath a jockey cap, mounted on a tortoise-like Foreign Minister Alec Douglas-Home) and allows the boring appearances of the famous and notorious to shine through in tedium. Towse's contribution to the show includes beautifully finished paintings on glass of such subjects as "Towse's Suspender" and "Powder Pull With Powder," which are neo-realism verging on the minimal,

The castrato was Giovanni Battista Velluti, and he headed the st of the first London production in 1825, a cast which included, by the way, the then 16-year-old Maria Gercla, later celebrated as Maria Malibran. Castrati had been taken for granted in London in the 18th century, and were treated with compassion, the best of them with deference. By Velluti's time, a castrato was a curiosity, and his appearance in "Il Crociato in Egitto" occasioned a good deal of levity, all of it cruel, some of it pretty bawdy.

The opera deserves remembrance for more substantial and more decorous reasons; as was demonstrated in last night's concert performance by the enterprising Opera Rara at the Elizabeth Hall. Despite an appalling libretto, it is quite an opera; and a cast boasting not a single hig name gave it an astonishingly and admirably bill-

Cosmopolitan

The very name, Giacomo Meyerbeer, suggests a cosmopolitan ersonality. He was born Jakob Beer, in Berlin, in 1731, changed Jakob to Giacomo during his 10 years in Italy, retained Giacomo throughout his long residence in Paris as the greatest composer of French grand opera.

Much of this cosmopolitan disposition is apparent in "Il Crociato in Egitto," the last, and presumably the best, of the sequence of Italian operas which carned him, at the time, a position second only to Rossin's in the affections of the Italian public.

the conventions of opera seria a German predilection for adventurous harmony and sophisticated instrumentation that would characterize and dominate the transition from opera seria to grand opera. One is accustomed to noting, in his later French operas, the extent to which he foreshadowed both Vardi and Wagner. The portents are already striking and effective in "Il Crociato in Egitto."

Although Lester Johnson, director of graduate studies in painting at Yale, has had a number of one-man shows in the United States, this is the first time that his work has been properly exhibited in England. He works on a large scale. His canvases are impressive with strong and harsh figures moving in all directions. The show is an exciting starter for the new gal-lery, which will stock Johnson after the exhibition is over and where there are also works by Shin Kuno, Chillida and Forrester. The gallery is in a beautiful private house and keeps normal London gallery hours.

On Mongoloid Babies: Do Parents Have a Choice?

By Anthony Shaw

This is the first of a two-part article by Dr. Shaw, associate professor of surgery and pediatrics at the University of Virginia Medical Center, from The New York Times Features Service.

In the grim drama of surgery on the intestines and even the the pediatric surgeon's lot is hearts of newborns. usually a happy one. He operates on critically ill newborn infants and gives them the 70 years' life expectancy of which nature would have deprived them.

A common script for practitioners of my specialty: Baby is born with a portion of his intestines missing; his food and intestinal juices swell his little belly; he vomits repeatedly and will die if nothing is done. Enter the pediatric surgeon. He performs a 45-minute operation; the intestine is rejoined, digestion proceeds unimpeded, and a healthy infant goes home with his happy parents. Events unfortunately do not always follow this cheerful script. Sometimes a baby with this new gift of years has a digestive tract that is superior in potential to that of his brain. He is a mongoloid.

About 1 in 600 births in the United States is a baby with Down's syndrome — mongolism, John Langdon Haydon Down, who described this form of mental retardation about 100 years ago, thought that the Oriental appearance common to children with mongolism proved an ancient link hetween the Caucasian and Oriental races. We don't know much more about wby mongoloid children look the way they do than Down did, but we tend to reject the simple notion that these severely retarded youngsters are throwbacks to a more primitive race of man. Geneticists have found that mongoloids have an extra chromosome inside the cell nucleus. They should have 46, like you and me; instead, they have 47. The chromosomes carry the genes which determine all our characteristics from the color of our eyes to the potential size of our brain. Why that 47th chromosome causes a baby to have slanted eyes, a broad nose, a protruding tongue, a single crease running the breadth of his palm, and an IQ of 30, we don't know yet.

Most mongoloid infants survive the traumas of birth and proceed into infancy, but many are born with lethal defects, such as congenital heart disease and obstructed intestines. Not very. many years ago such bables were not selvegeable, and physicians and parents alike were relieved when a merciful God prevented the survival of what was then called a "mongolian idiot." But we have learned how to operate

As women get deeper into middle age their chances of bearing a mongoloid child increase Miss H. a busy attorney, was well into her 30s when she married her law partner, Mr. G. Three years later their efforts to have a baby wers finally rewarded by a 41/2pound premature infant, umnisakabiy mongoloid. Happiness dissolved into grief, shock, rage and disbelief. "How could this happen to us? Why did this happen to us?" Then —"Are you sire, doctor?" We were sure. An examination of the nuclear material of the baby's blood cells showed the extra chromosome. The Gs. were faced with a difficult choice: Take home this bitter fruit of their years of dreaming or place him in an institution and banish him from home and mind. But at age two days, Baby G. changed the options. He vamited every feeding, spitting up a combination of formula and bile. He had an intestinal obstruction. Surgery was necessary. Twenty-five years ago a new-born with a blocked intestinal tract stood less than a 50-50 chance of surviving surgery. Many surgeons would have considered such surgery in an obviously mongoloid infant not worth the risk and effort. With the development of pediatric surgery and the better understanding of the differences between newborns and edults, surgery and anesthesia have improved to the point where operations on tiny infants are routine. An instance of intestinal surgery on a newborn mongoloid, which would have heen considered heroic surgery a few years ago, was described in a recent newspaper article as a "simple operation."

Baby G.'s pediatrician expected me to perform this "simple operation." The interns and residents were eager to assist; the anesthetist was standing by. Then Mr. G. asked: "Don't we have any choice?" And, indeed, I felt they did.

The choice they made was—no surgery. They had no intention of raising a human being whose maximum achievement might be the ability to write his own name, Furthermore, they did not an institutional existence, "If I knew the baby would be mongoloid," Mrs. G. said, "I would have had an abortion." This argument allowed the Gs. to live

The argument that mongoloids raised in the home perform better than those raised in an institution is rarely persuasive with such parents. The ministry attributed the increase to a monetary inflow of advance payments for exports, a new allocation to Japan of the International Monetary Fund's special drawing rights, re-evaluation at the new parity of Japan's gold reserve, and bankers' repayments of foreign exchange special

Rise in U.S. National Debt Ceiling Asked

Connally Says Action Is Needed to Pay Bills

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 (IHT). Tressury Secretary John B. Connally and Budget Director George P. Shultz urged Congress today to increase the national debt ceiling by $50 billion.

The two top administration fiscal spokesmen also insisted that Fresident Nixon had no plans to ask for tax increa despite the huge budget deficits that led to the request for an increase in the debt limit.

In testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee, Secretary Connally explained that the increase was needed urgently so the government can arrange "an early March borrowing" to pay its bills. The actual debt is now very close to the present $430-billion limit.

"Failure to obtain an increase in the debt limit, will, in a very short time, force us to move to costly and uneconomic expedients to meet our obligations, and then to abrupt cutting off of govern-ment expenditures," Mr. Connally declared.

In addition, the Treasury secretary told the panel, even the $480-hillion ceiling would only cover government borrowing for one year and that by next February, another increase would have to be sought.

Budget Director Shultz testified that the deficits were "strong medicine for the economy" and would provide stimulus to expand production and reduce unemploy-

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 31 have an important bearing on (NYI).—Argentina is looking for the political outlook. billion in foreign credits in order to inject confidence into its economy, and thus aid President Alejandro Agustin Lanusse holding elections next year, as has been promised.

The 17 months that remain intil the presidential and legislative elections for a constitu tional government are regarded by observers here as filled with political risks.

Some members of the military government, which has been in power since 1966, view the May, 1973, elections, which are championed by Gen. Lamese, as a leap in the dark because of unfavorable economic conditions.

"A negative economic situation could produce a negative electoral result, and the armed forces are not going to hand over the govent in conditions that could tear the country apart," said s high government source.

The success in obtaining substantial credit in the United States and Western Europe, which can offset debt payments of $600 million due by July, 1973, and finance new investments, will

Although Argentina has one of the most developed Latin American economies, with an annual per capits income of close to $1,000 for its 24 million people, the economy is alling This has contributed to an increase in political and social conflicts.

Inflation soared last year, with the cost of living rising 40 percent. Foreign reserves, which had been built up to about $800 million in October, 1970, were virtuwiped out by trade deficits and capital flight leaving reserves of approximately $150 million in gold. Economic growth was a weak 25 percent in 1971. These symptoms of economic disorder led Gen. Lanusse, the army commander in chief, and his fellow navy and air force commanders to topple Gen. Marcelo Levinstone from the presidency in March. Carlos Brignone, the president of the central bank, flies to Washington today for the start of negotiations with Western creditors. He will seek to convince international lenders that Argentina is worthy of large new credits on the basis of measures that have been adopted to restrain wage increases, reduce credit and finance public spend-

A mission from the International Monetary Fund has been bere to assess the effectiveness of the plan for dealing with in-fiation, and for stabilizing the balance of payments. The first elements of the stabilization plan have received cautions endorsement by economic analysts and bankers, but the General Confederation of Labor has vigorously protested the suspension of collective bargaining on wage contracts. Industrial groups are protesting credit cuts. These reactions have reduced the likelihood that the stabilization plan will get political support from the major parties, which are organizing themselves, after six years of military rule, to est in USIP by purchasing more than 10.5 million shares in excess of $33.5 million, Andrew G. C. Sage 2d, president of Lehman Brothers, said in an inter-view. The New York investment banking firm is acting as financial consultant in the reorganization.

Arlen Bahamas will obtain its stock from those margin share-holders who do not reinstate their defaulted bank loans within a 120-day period yet to be fixed, Mr. Sage said. The margin holders originally borrowed about 50 percent of their stock purchase price, but they defaulted on interest pay-ments after USIF balted cash redemptions in 1970. Under the reorganization plan, these margin accounts generally can be re-instated if the holder pays 20 percent of his loan principal and accrued interest in the 120-day period, and the balance in four Arien Bahamas "has stated its intention to begin paying dividends on USOF shares" within about a year after court approval of the reorganization plan, Mr. Sage said. "There also is a reasonably good chance for an eventual resumption of trading USIF shares on several international securities markets that would permit holders to regain some of their funds, although the stock price initially will be lower than recent book value" of about $6.02 a share (after depreciation),

Dow Average Drops 4, Low-Price Stocks Gain

By Vartanig G. Vartan

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (NYT) --Leading stock-market averages moved lower today as glamour issues were buffeted and many low-price issues gained on the New York Stock Exchange. Amid these cross-currents, the Dow Jones industrial average slump-ed 421 to finish at 902.17.

This loss followed two strong sessions last week, when the Dow ran up 10.68 on Thursday and then 6.55 on Friday. In addition, the volume on Friday boomed to 25 million shares—the heaviest turnover in more than five months—with signs that both speculation and the small investor were returning to the market.

But it was a more cautious marbears appeared to emerge from hibernation and the investment community began to ponder a reawakened set of worries.

The four gainers on the list of 15 most-active issues climbing by a point or better-Whittaker Curtiss-Wright, American Standard and Ling-Temco-Vought-were cited by some brokers as sym-bolic of the interest in low-price issues, many of which have been depressed severely over the last 18 months. Levitz Furniture, the market's most spectacular loser, plummet-ed 17 to 137 1/2. This stock, which recently hit a record high at 159 1/4, has boomed upward from its 1970 low of 13 3/8, as adjusted for stock splits, with heavy institutional buying as a key factor.

What knocked the props out from under Levitz today was the midsession report carried by the Dow Jones news service that the New York State attorney general's office had started an inquiry into the role of mutual funds in the sharp price advance in Levitz shares. One week ago, Levitz dropped 9 1/4 after Barrom's ran an article delving into some of the business dealings at the company that popularized the concept of warehouse furniture selling.

Other declines among glamour issues included Bausch & Lomb, down 7 3/4 to 185 1/2, Walt Disney Productions, off 3 to 158 1/2, and Polaroid, down 1 7/8 to Arctic Enterprises, a leading producer of snowmobiles, slid 2 5/8 to 28 5/6. It dropped 6 1/2 last week in the wake of lower profits for the December-quarter.

Aileen, the biggest point loser on the active list, fell 3 7/8 to 16 3/8 after showing a decline in 1971 earnings.

SEC to Urge Wider Scope On Negotiated Commissions

By Robert D. Hershey Jr. NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (NYT) .prospect of less inducement for

The eagerly-awaited policy state-ment that the Securities & Exchange Commission (SEC) plans to issue this week on a broad spectrum of Wall Street issues will include a recommendation that the public be allowed to participate in price concessions when large blocks of stock are offered

SEC chairman William J. Casey alluded to the problem of moving large blocks under a ne-gotiated commission set-up in an ddress Saturday to an investment conference. In an interview following his talk, Mr. Casey declined to describe bow such a system would work but he indicated it would be part of the policy recommendations this week. Public access to stock at less than prevailing market prices would be a significant development. Its desirability is closely tied to one of the most basic questions the policy statement will take up—that of negotiated rates on the portion of transactions in excess of a given dollar This level, now $500,000, is expected to be cut to $300,000 under the SEC's proposals. But reduced commissions-and negotiated rates have proved so far to be lower rates-raise the

Taiwan recently earned a place in the next Bermuds Bowl world championship scheduled for 1973 hy winning the Far East title in Melbourne.

The leading positions were:
first, Taiwan, 107.86; second,
Australia, 97.39; third, Thailand, 94.86. The other contestants, in finishing order, were Indonesia, Hong Kong, Japan, New Zealand, Philippines, South Vietnam and South Korea

The Taiwanese were sure of the title after defeating Australia, 8-0, in the next-to-the-last match. One of the key deals from this match is shown in the diagram. The bidding is not on record, but the sequence shown is a possibility. South has not quite enough to open with a forcing bid, but makes a jump shift to three hearts when his partner answers in spades. As this shows a powerful hand, North has the right to

The Australian declarer won the opening trump lead in dummy with the king, led to the heart queen, confirming the normal trump division, and played to the diamond king. His next move was to play three top clubs, but West ruffed. Dummy overruffed. South then tried the diamond finesseunsuccessfully-and the slam was defeated.

The timing would have to be careful: heart queen, spade ace, heart king, spade ruff, diamond king, spade ruff, club ace, club ruff, heart ace and claim, using the diamond ace as entry to the

To most Americans—and to many Europeans, too-gospei music means Mahalia Jackson, the Clara Ward Singers, the Staples Singers and, thanks to "O Happy Day," the Edwin Hawkins

Very few will have heard of Roberta Martin, whose remains were viewed by 50,000 black Cbi-cagoans in Mount Pisgah Baptist Church in January, 1969. There was no obituary in The New York Times, nor, according to Tony Heilbut, was her funeral reported even in Jet, although it may have been the largest ever held in Chi-

Nor will many ave heard of Thomas A. Dorsey and his partner, Sallie Martin: of James Cleveland ("the Grown Prince of Gospel"): or Clara Hudman ("the Georgia Peach"); of Queen C. Anderson ("the Queen of the South"), of Ernestine Washington ("the Songbird of the East"), of Marion Williams, who left the Ward Singers in 1958 to form her own Stars of Faith, or of Willie Mae Ford Smith, whose singing inspired the young Mabalia Jack-son to say: "Wille Mae, I'm gonna leave this beauty shop and be like you."

And yet their influence is evident in the singing of many of today's soul headliners—and far beyond. Aretha Franklin was a protegée of James Clevcland. Ira Tucker, of the Dixle Hummingbirds, tutored Bobby Bland, Julius Cheek, of the Nightingales, in-spired Sam Cooke and Wilson Pickett. And Simon and Garfunkel's "A Bridge Over Troubled Waters" is derived from a number by Claude Jeter, of the Swan Sil-

As Hellbut puts lt: "For forty years America has nurtured un-acknowledged a cultural form as imposing as jazz . . . The gospel sound Roberta Martin helped inaugurate is everywhere. All of rock's most resilient features, the beat, the drama, the group vibrations, derive from gospel. But gospel singers and their audiences remain the best-kept secret of ghetto culture. Church people understand spirit, 'soul,' if you will, better than anyone: 'After all, we invented it. All this mess you hear calling itself soul ain't nothing but warmed over gospel."

Gospel music goes back to the spirituals and beyond them to the 18th-century revivalist hymns of the white settlers, notably the Rev. Dr. Isaac Watts's "Amazing Grace" (the music by an English composer, John Newton), the most famous of them all, and equally beloved by both white and black fundamentalist congregations.

What distinguishes gospel from the spiritual is the blues beat and blues riffs, which began to work their way into the music of the black Baptist and "Sanctified" What the blacks did, in Heilbut's words, was "combine the revival hymns of 18th-century England with an African song style and create our greatest national mu-

The most influential figure in this development was Thomas A. Dorsey, still living in Chicago, who, significantly, in an earlier incarnation as Georgia Tom, had been plane accompanist for both Me Raincy and Bessie Smith, the two greatest of the early female blues shouters. He has been the most prolific composer of grapel songs, and, as both publisher and impresario, was primarily respen-sible for making the best of the gospel singers itinerant profes-

The impact of this music upon American musical life has been obscured by the insistence of the "Sanctified" congregations upon dissociating their music—and their singers, as Rosetta Thorpe learned to her sorrow-from the "sinful" blues. It is now commonly agreed that rock-as originally unleashed in the urgent-vocalism and frenetic gyrations. of Elvis Presiey-represented blend of black rhythm and blues with white country and Western, What is much less widely acknowledged or understood is that rhythm and blues was essentially a secular exten-sion of gospel, many rhythm and blues singers—Little Richard among them—having cut their musical teeth in gospel choirs and groups.

Heilbut has accomplished an admirable, if sometimes repeli-tious and hyperbole-burdened, ex-ploration of gospel music—its history, its store-front church environment, its male quartets, female choirs and celebrated soloists. He reckons its greatest period to bave been the years between 1945 and 1960. During the sixties it succumbed some-what to nightclub and TV temptation, exposure and exploitation—and to the growing sophistication of younger blacks, who find much of it emotionsily and intellectually, if not musically, primitive.

It has, in fact, simply been swept by—and enriched, via rhythm and bines—the mainstream of American music, Az Marion Williams puts it, in accents and cadences that Heibut has captured nicely in proce: "Most of what they're dolor, key changes and way-out beats, the Kings of Harmony was doing when I was a girl ... Anything I hear, jazz, soul, rock, they got some gospel snuck up in them somewhere. You know, I can't understand it. They used to call us crazy and clowns and Holy Rollers, and now all these white children are carrying on worse than we ever did, and every-body's hostied like it was something new. I'm looking for them to start speaking in tongues next!"

Austria to Appeal IOC Decision

Schranz Disqualified From Olympics

From Wire Dispatches SAPPORO, Jupan, Jan. 31 Austrian officials will decide tomorrow whether to withdraw their team from the Winter Olympic Games here in protest against the banning today of their Alpine skiing ace Karl Schranz

The officials said they would await the outcome of an appeal they are making tomorrow to the International Olympic Con despite an earlier statement by IOC president Avery Brundage that no appeal was allowed. Schrauz, 33, was barred from the games by the IOC, which voted 28-14 to declare him ineligible because of alleged "profes-sionalism." The IOC's eligibility to be used in commercial advertising.

The committee, in a statemen inflowing a meeting today, said that "considering the activities and influence of Karl Schrans, the way he has permitted the use of his name and pictures, it has been decided that he will be ineligible to participate in the Xith Winter Olympics."

France Won't Withdraw From Games

SAPPORO, Japan, Jan. 31 (UPI).—French Ski Federation president Maurice Martel said today the French Alpine skling team will not walk out of the XIth Winter Olympics because of the disqualification of Austria's Karl Schranz.

"We are doing nothing." Martel said. "The decision by the 100 is lamentable and scandalons. They should have told Schranz about it at the beginning of the season and not three days before the Games start, not after he is in the Olympic Vil-

Bills Likely to Draft for Defensive Help

By William N. Wallace

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (NYT) —Walter Patulski, a 6-foot-5-inch 260-pound defensive end who pool N.Y. a Syracuse suburb, is expected to be the first of 442 collegians drafted by the National Football League's 26 teams tomorrow. Patriski and Bobby Moore, a running back or wide receiver from Oregon, are the two most highly regarded players from what the pro-acouts have described as a below-average pool of college talent. The Buffalo Bills have the first pick and, because they need imemen ahead of backs or receivers, Patulski is believed to hold a priority over Moore. The Cincinnati Bengals have the second choice and they are likely to take whomever remains, Moore or Patulski. After that it is anybody's guess, as usual, how the NFL's 37th player selection meeting will go. Communications headquarters will be here to the Essex House and Butfalo will make its first pick at 10 a.m. The Dallas Cowboys, the league champions, will make the 442d and last choice of the final 17th round late Wednesday after-

The Bills are the privileged team because they had the poorest NFL won-lost record last season, 1-13, and the teams select in reverse order of the final standings. The Chicago Bears will have two selections on the first round as will the Green Bay Packers and New York Jets, while the Washington Redskins, Los Angeles Rams and San' Diego Chargers will have none due to trades. The Jets obtained Washington's pick when they dealt the Redskins Werlon Biggs last year.

The New York Giants traded their first to Chicago last September but gained Minnesota's in the exchange for Fran Tarkenton last week.
The New Orleans Saints will have the most picks, 24, and the Redskins the fewest, 10. A pair of draft experts and amateur scouts, Carl Marasco and his brother, Pete, have made their annual evaluation for The New York Times. They have listed, alphabetically, the 26 players they regard as the best, regardless of position, and whom they expect to be drafted on

The list includes the calebrated Ed Marinaro of Cornell but excludes Pat Sullivan, the Heisman Trophy winner from Auburn. .The Marasco brothers ranked for Pro Pootball Weekly 725 players by position and Sullivan was heir fifth quarterback behind John Reaves Florida; Jerry Tagge, Nebraska; Gary Wichard, C.W. Post and Brian Sipe, San Diego State. Marinaro is their No. 2 fullback behind Franco Harris of Penn State. Both made the top-26 list. Their No. 1 "steeper" this year is Roosevelt Manning, a 265-pound defensive tackle from Northeastern Oklahoma State: You will not find Manning on the top 26 list, but you will find Lionel Autoine, a 255-pound tackle from Southern Illinois, who is married and the father of three. Antoine, from Blioxi, Miss., said that he expects a hig bonus. "It's like waiting for Christmas and wondering what's in the package," he said.

Gil Brandt, the noted Dallas scott, said that: the current draft crop is the poorest since he has been in the business. "We think the only bine chips this year are Patulat, Moore, Reaves and Buchanon," he said. Willie Buchanon of San Diego State is a crack cornerback. THE TOP 28

Harney's Final 70 Wins Golf by 1

By Lincoln A. Werden SAN DIEGO, Calif., Jan. 31 (NYT).—Paul Harney, a 42-year-old who considers himself a stayat-home chib professional, won the Andy Williams-San Diego

Open yesterday by one stroke. Silver haired and the father of six, Harney beat a younger challenger, Hale Irwin, 26-year-old former University of Colorado football star and a former national collegiate golf champion, in the closing round, 70 to 72, over the picturesque Torrey Pines course for an aggregate of 275. Irwin; who held a . three-

39 to complete his 276 total, but in the 1964 and 1965 Los Angeles said, "I don't consider I choked. I don't know if my general comment is printable. I hit a lot of good shots over the front nine and then a progression of bad shots and bad putting did me

Later. Irwin said that spike marks around the cup at the 15th hole affected his two-foot putt that rimmed the cup and stayed out for a bogey 5. That brought him even with Harney, who was playing two holes ahead. Harney, who competed in only

15 tour events last year while head pro at the Pleasant Valley stroke lead over Harney with Country Chib in Sutton, Mass., nine holes to go, came back in

Meloche, Seals' Rookie Goalie, Scores 2d Straight Shutout

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 31 a close game with two goals while (AP).—Rookie Stan Gilbertson gave Gillez Meloche the only goal he needed as the California goalie turned in his second successive National Hockey League shutout yesterday and the Golden Seals defeated Vancouver, 2-0.

Gilbertson, a 27-year-old left wing, scored his 11th goal of the season with 2 minutes 8 seconds gone in the first period, then as-sisted on Walt McKechnie's 11th goal with 2:13 remaining in the Meloche, who blanked Toronto in California's 3-0 victory Friday night, turned aside 29 Canuck shots, 16 of them coming in the final period. Rangers 1, North Stars 1 Minnesota stretched its unbeaten string to seven straight games when it rallied for a 1-1 tie with New York on Murray Oliver's third-period goal.

Kings & Sabres 2 Bill Lesuk and Juha Widing scored third-period goals to lift Los Angeles from a 2-0 deficit to s 2-2 tie with Buffalo in a battle of last-place teams. Bruins 5, Blues 2

Short-handed goals only 35 seconds apart by Bobby Orr and Derek Sanders sparked Boston past St. Louis, 5-2, and ran the Bruins' unbeaten streak to 10 games. Bruin defenseman Dallas Smith was penalized for holding mid-way in the second period and Boston blew open what had been

St. Louis had the man advantage. Flyers 4, Penguins 0

Pirst-period goals by Dick Sarresin and Bobby Clerka sparked Philadelphia to a 4-0 victory over Pittsburgh. Sarrazin open-ed the scoring at 6:23 of the first period on a pass from Jean-Guy Gendron. Clarke tallied on a rebound at 18:57.

Chicago came from behind twice before goals by Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull gave the Black Hawks a 4-3 victory over Detroit.

The Kissinger Quints

WASHINGTON.—The hig- work on duplicating exact models West mystery of President of him (most of the volunteers Nixon's speech last week was were German scientists who had when he revealed that Henry heen laid off by the space pro-Kissinger had made as many as 10 secret trips to Paris to negotiate with the North Vietnamese.

Most people who watched the President found it hard to believe that Mr. Kissinger could have gone to Peking twice, Faris 12 times and Hollywood 456 times. How, the big question is, can Buchwald one man do it? The answer can now be revealed. There is not one Henry Kissinger, but five.

When President Nixon first came into the White House, he knew he was faced with problems all over the world. He also was aware that he needed a foreign affairs expert who could speak in his name. But he didn't want to spread these duties around. So he contacted the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., and gave them the problem. The NIH said they were working on a project where they could turn out five people completely alike in every respect. All they needed was a model.

The President called in Henry

Kissinger, who was then a professor at Harvard, and told him what the President had on his mind. The real Kissinger, who hates to fly, agreed to go along He went out to NIH for a month, and the doctors got to

Ruined City Unearthed In Northern Greece

SALONICA, Greece, Jan. 31 (UPI).-Ruins of an ancient city have been discovered in the Komotini area of northern Greece, archaeological authorities have announced. Andreas Varvitass, curator of archaeology for Salonica, said the ruins are believed to be those of the city of Messimhria. He said that parts of two streets lined with houses have been unearthed, along with coins and vases dating from the fourth century BC during the reign of Philip II, father of Alexander the Great.

Plastic surgeons went to work on the faces. Hair specialists and makeup men were brought in. In a few cases, transplants had to be made to get Kissinger's axact measurements.

By trial and error with 13 volunteers, four were finally selected who looked talked and appeared to be facsimiles of Kissinger. (The seven volunteers who didn't make it were buried at midnight with full military honors.)

With five Henry Kissingers to work with, President Nixon was able to go ahead with his foreign policy plans.

A special dormitory had heen built in the basement of the White House where all the Henry Klasingers lived when they weren't out on a trip.

Whenever the President wanted a Kissinger for an assignment, he spoke into a special microphone attached to a loudspeaker in the dorm. "Who wants to go to Peking?" If more than one singer wanted to go, they would cut cards for it.

If the President needed a Kissinger for a backgrounder in the White House, he would yell down. "Will one of you guys come up to brief the press?" Or, as in the case of the secret North Vietnamese peace talks, the President would shout. "Send someone up to go to Paris." One Kissinger would take the dnty at Key Biscayne, Fla., and another would accompany the President to San Clemente, Calif. The most ingenious part of the strategy was when someone in the White House decided to give Kissinger the image of a swinger. "If we make him a swinger and have him photographed with beantiful women in Hollywood. New York and Washington, we will have everybody fooled. At the very moment that he's danc-sweet and sour pork with Chou En-lai." While all five Kissingers wanted to play the role of the swinger, it was decided to give it to the real Henry Kissinger, as a reward for lending his name and his body to the foreign policy of the

NEW YORK (NYT).—"I didn't set out in life to be a humorist," said Russell Baker. "I set out to be a novelist, and I look like a povelist. Art Buchwald looks like a humorist. Art Buchwald looks like Art Buchwald. I don't look like him and most of the time I don't even look like

"My look is that of a decaying boy. Tall Six foot two. A little like the young Gary Cooper, shy and charming. Slouchy. Pot-bellied. Round-shouldered. Forty-six years old. Too many crows-feet around the eyes. Shabby, seedy. My tie's never the right width, my suits always unpressed, and I need a shoeshine. I could never get my hair past the wind-tunnel test."

Nothing daunted, he is now half-way through his first Baker's dozen of books put together from his columns for this newspaper, plus thoughts of shattering insight and wit not printed to fit.

His newest book is entitled "Poor. Russell's Almanac," and is just out too late for New Year's, too early for Christmas, but right for the rest of the year.

"Mine was a time when every young man in college wanted not to work but to write," said Baker in an interview. The novel still had a certain cachet. Hemingway was still climbing into the ring with Tolstoy, and Norman Maller was going to the mat for the sixth time with the Bitch

The Observer Observed

produced an additional 5,000 words, which got right into print.

A thankful Sun sent him to London in 1952, and in 1953 asked him if he wanted to be White House correspondent. "I made one of the basic errors of my life," said Baker. 'I gave up one of the great jobs in journalism—London correspondent—to go to the White House. There's nothing worse than being a White House correspondent; it's the nadir.

"Elsenhower is President. I meet Jim

Hagerty. I sit in the White House lobby with all these great names in journalism: Merriman Smith. Nobody's doing anything. People reading detective novels. Sleeping. Breathing. Then the big story comes: Risenhower is taking a vacation. Off we go to Denver for eight weeks.

"Reston had written to me when I was in London—he'd just taken over the Washington bureau of The Times and asked me if I was wedded to The Baltimore Sun. When he came through Denver, I asked him if he'd take me off the White House beat if I joined The Times. Sure, he said, so I joined. Five months later I was back in the White House.

"It was 1955 and The Times was beginning to change. They wanted something different hut yet they didn't. Certain peo-ple would urge you to try things, you'd get sway with something, and then the next time they'd cut your head off." When The Baltimore Sun tried to lure

Baker back, Reston arranged a counteroffer involving a regular column.
"At that time there was Topics of The Times, which ran down the center of the editorial page. I think copy boys wrote it for $25 a time. They wanted me to take over the title, and I objected on grounds that nobody had read anything under that title for 30 years.

"My conception was to keep it casual," said Baker. "I'd always been very interested in what The New Yorker did in The Talk of the Town, and I though! we could do it with advantage—get away from 'Gee whiz, how the stuff flew!', get away from A.P. leads. I wanted to keep sentences short and use Anglo-Saxon words. I wanted to say not 'utilize' but 'use.' The Times had imposed a silly Latinate sound on itself, and when my casual approach appeared in The Times it was considered humor. If people tell you long enough you're writing humor, you begin to do it."

Friday, Sunday and Tuesday are Baker's work days; and he gets up earlier, which means 9 o'clock. After reading three news-papers carefully, he breakfasts, drives to the office and goes out for a heavy lunch. "I get back about 2:30, close the door.

seal the blinds, put paper in the typewriter and wait and see what's in me," he said. "At heart I'm a tombstone builder, and I'm worried about what the epitaph is going to say about me," he went on .. "I. would still like to have a very serious book behind me, admired by the literary maga-zines, reviewed favorably by Commentary. But now I don't think I'll make it."

And so he leaves planetary problems to less casual colleagues, "I can contemplate the H-bomb with equanimity and I never did think it would be that much of a disaster if the human race were wiped out," said Baker,

"I'm more upset by signs of my own decay, and I go about life with a grest deal of self-pity. The moments I feel good are when I'm not feeling depressed. "Writing the column is like being a baseball player—144 times up at bat a year. You get slumps. You go through periods when everything gets worse and worse, when you get 0 for 26. The metronomic quality of a columnists life is like Chinese water torture. FridaySundayTuesday, FridaySundayTuesday. That stretches out in front of me till I'm 65. I don't see how anybody with less zest for life than Joe Alsop keeps himself from going out the
